

ABSTRACT

A method for clarifying a sludge, characterized in that a raw waste water is subjected to a solid-liquid separator and then to a primary filtration device, to separate it into a solid material and liquid material, and the resultant liquid treated material is then treated by a process comprising an ozone treatment and a special light ray treatment.